Whispering Foolishness
Rockefeller Listens
The Colored Porter's Job

WINSLOW, ARIZ., Dec. 29.—Newspapers talk of a "whispering campaign," suggesting that Herbert Hoover is not eligible to the Presidency, because, working at his profession as engineer in various parts of the world, he has not spent all of the last fourteen years in the United States. The Constitution says: "Neither shall a person be eligible to that office who shall not have been fourteen years a resident of the United States."

Herbert Hoover was born in the United States, has worked wherever he chose in any part of the earth, which is the right of every American. He did not lose his citizenship or birthright by crossing the ocean.

His travels, seeing what science and engineering have accomplished elsewhere, have enabled Herbert Hoover to suggest on a sound basis, magnificent, needed projects for the United States.

The grand Lama of Tibet is supposed to live cooped in one place, but the United States doesn't need a grand Lama for President.

When they told Lincoln that General Grant drank too much whiskey, he asked what kind of whiskey and suggested that the same be given to other generals.

It would be a good idea to find out just where Herbert Hoover has done his traveling and send some of our other statesmen on the same trip.

They need it.

Mr. Hoover's ancestors were born and lived in America for six generations. Not that it makes any difference. The son of any immigrant, born in this country, might be, and often is, ten times better than a man with ten American generations back of him.

Part of Hoover's absence abroad was devoted to war work, feeding hungry children. Would he make a better president had he spent that time at home, working for war profits?

John D. Rockefeller, eighty-eight years old, immediately changes his "stance" at golf when told by a professional that he stood too close to the ball. That change lengthened his drive by twenty yards and he won a nickel, solemnly bet, with his friend General Ames, and went home contented.

Mr. Rockefeller has said that his success in the beginning was due to patience and economy.

It may have been due also to his ability to listen to others and take advice. That is a thing that many young men who would like to be Rockefellers have not learned to do.

MYSTERIOUS BILLY AND BULLETS CLEWS IN DONOVAN SLAYING

John J. Donovan, ex-convict, was killed by a man seated in the back seat of Donovan's automobile, the South Boston Court was told today when the two men charged with the murder were held without bail for the Grand Jury.

The shooting victim, who served sentence in State Prison for stabbing a man to death at City Point nine years ago, was killed as he sat in his automobile.

Arraigned as his murderers were Michael Rocco, alias "Mickey the Wise Guy," thirty-one, of Allan street, West End, and William F. O'Donnell, twenty-five, of Longwood avenue, Roxbury.

Police [illegible] are endeavoring to learn ownership of a machine gun, "short bills" found on the floor of the car. The bills were of the type that went out of Boston vogue in 1920 and is not used now by the officers.

When arrested after a chase through South Boston streets, Rocco and O'Donnell claimed the three bullets fired into Donovan, said to be a "rum war" victim, were from another automobile that rode [illegible] alongside.

KISSER CAN NEVER LOOK AT GIRL AGAIN FOR LIFE

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 29 (A.P.)—"Never look at a woman again" was the sentence imposed by President Judge E. C. Newcomb today on James Flynn, 60, magazine sales man, convicted of assault and battery.

Flynn admitted to the court that he attempted to kiss a woman patron, but declared he could not resist the temptation to do so because she resembled his favorite sister who died years ago.

"If you will promise never to look at another woman you can go free," remarked the court.

"I promise," said Flynn.

Court Finds Remus Is "Insane"

Cincinnati, Dec. 29 (A.P.)—George Remus, the former "King of Bootleggers," today was condemned to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Lima as "insane and a dangerous person to be at large" just a week after he cheated the electric chair when a jury found him not guilty of the murder of his wife on the sole ground of insanity.

The decision was handed down by Judge William H. Lueders, of the Hamilton County Probate Court, who spoke in unmistakable terms.

fog of a Los Angeles druggist a year ago, Clemmins Kee.

Police detectives today began an attempt to connect Hickman with the shooting to death of Constable F. C. Bennett, in a millinery store in Fort Worth, Tex., on the morning of January 25, last, one month and a day after the murder of the druggist.

Taking like a bored schoolboy, Hickman seated on Superior Judge Charles Hardy's court and listened to the reading of an indictment charging him with the kidnaping and murder of 12-year-old Marion Parker.

STOOD AT BAIL

An extension of time for pleading was asked by Jerome Walsh, Kansas City attorney who is here to represent Hickman. Judge Hardy set 2 p. m., Tuesday, as the time for arraignment in the case.

Counsel for the accused then left for Judge Hardy's court, but there was no disorder. The entire room is in the Hall of Justice, which is heavily guarded by police, and as Hickman is confined, Hickman was taken into the court through a rear passageway.

Hickman stood at the rail during the reading of the indictment. His hands, manacled, as they are required in court by law, were reddish in color, suggesting chilly work in the white face. His hair seemed to be in need of a trim.

He spoke only one word in court. This was when Judge Hardy asked if he pleaded guilty.

Hickman's arraignment followed an unexpected series of events. The case This was the confession of Hickman and Walter Hunt, 19-year-old schoolboy friend, that they had held up Marion Parker on the day before Christmas Eve, 1926, Thamis being killed in an interchange of shots.

Hickman in his confession of the Thamis killing, named Hunt as his accomplice, but Hunt has said he did not know whether he or Hunt had fired the shot which had killed the druggist.

Hunt, who was brought in as his accomplice and grilled after Hickman had named him, denied he had had anything to do with the Thamis holdup. He admitted he had been Hickman's partner on the occasion, and in holdups in other cities, including Fort Worth, San Diego, Phoenix and Kansas City.

Although police do not believe Hunt has any part in the Parker murder they are conducting investigation based on a previous statement made by Hickman to police department from where Hickman lived, and where he held the Parker girl captive and killed her. According to this statement, a youth named Hunt, a friend and neighbor of Hickman and seen leaving the apartment house the night of the murder.

Attorney Walsh, who is the son of Senator Walsh, said he will not know his plans for defense of Hickman until after reading a brief filed at the courthouse by Asst. Dist. Attorney Woolwine.

SOUGHT SUICIDE

"I came to Los Angeles as the personal and legal representative of an undoubtedly broken-hearted and remorseful mother and not as a hero here, in which he implanted the seeds of crime.

He said of being paroled following his conviction about three years ago on a charge of stealing an auto. He said this when he became acquainted with Hickman, who was then 17 years old, and that experience with the latter had suggested "I go out with them activities and make some easy money."

For the robberies, he said, Hunt and Hickman elected him as their lookout while they had stolen and sold cars as far as California with them. He refused. He said they left for Los Angeles on the day after the Thamis slaying and the car described by Mrs. Parker in kidnaping Marion Parker was found. Hickman was arrested when he was informed Hickman had been arrested with Hunt in a series of robberies.

Well, It Seems That Sen. Caraway Has Left Out the Swiss!

CHARGES PLOT.

Unable to obtain the indictments, the Grand Jury decided to make its report anyway for such action as might be decided upon.

Dorsey Hyde, foreman, insisted that the presentment be made to the Justice Department Bureau of the Federal Secret Service Agency, Gaston Means and Henry Mason Day, this clair oil officials Charles D. Hubby and Frank J. Duffy, must be acted upon by the district attorney's office.

Hyde said the jury had been confused by some time that the action of the men and the evidence they consolidated "conspiracy to defraud the United States" Government in presentment, which was prepared a week ago.

"CLEAR-CUT VIOLATION."

Hyde declared that because of the long delay in getting it out now before the courts, he was not surprised that the findings were given down yet.

"We did not expect the prosecutor officials to take any other action than they have taken," he said. "The evidence presented to the Grand Jury is clear cut violation of the law, and the indictments were in duly bound to return the presentment.

TWO BOYS CUT HOLE IN JEWELRY SHOWCASE

Two boys, ten years old, today were caught in an attempt to cut a hole in a jewelry showcase of Jason Weiler & Sons, in Washington street, Brighton, and escaped with a few trinkets.

despite the finding of three alienists who sat with him in an advisory capacity during the trial.

Three alienists, who had on part with Remus during the trial, were with the judge in the decision finding that Remus technically is insane.

"We also find that said George Remus is a dangerous person to be at large, and that he is a menace to himself and to others, and that he is in need of constant care and attention in order to protect himself and others from injury," Judge Lindsey said in his decision. "We also find that said George Remus is addicted to the use of morphine, and is a dangerous individual to be at large.

The alienists further disclosed that Remus is addicted to the use of morphine, is morally wrong to entrust further homicide."

The court then ordered Remus sent to the asylum until his "reason is restored to him, or he is discharged by due process of law."

It was brought out in the proceedings that Remus' mother, Mrs. Remus allowed to his previously expressed opinion that Remus was legal but not moral wrong for him to slay Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., of Cincinnati, Mich., former Federal Department of Justice agent.

Dodge was shot down by Remus under the Olds law by agents in the section, said Charles H. Elston, his attorney, appeal to the Court of Common Pleas through error proceedings, and that Remus will not go to the asylum pending this action.

Goodwin Backs Bill for "Less Honking and More Safety"

Through Representative Clarence S. Luttenberger of Newton a bill was filed in the Legislature today to repeal the regulation that motorists sound horns upon entering highways, and substitute one affording an amendment requiring that horns be sounded when a car passes another motor going the same way.

Luttenberger, manager of the bill Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin declared that horns tend to frighten pedestrians and cause confusion wherein the driver of a motor vehicle is concerned, as opposed to safety, since there is the necessity of sounding the horn and help to reduce the number of accidents.

Mrs. Johnson was awakened by the noise of the fall, but she, too, became unconscious after getting out of bed.

Her calls woke up Alban, who, following himself reeling, reached herself, but he became unconscious before he could give an alarm to Patrick Walsh, who occupied the room next to the Johnsons.

Walsh awakened his daughter, Alice, who was from the hospital, and they, with three brothers and Mrs. Walsh, were in the house and heard the noise.

The nurse started her family from the room and notified an attendant of the unconscious family, and Dr. Bowers was called. He found the Johnsons and Walsh unconscious. But by the time three arrived, her quick action was having effect.

A few doors away the three members of the Lewis family were also found dead. Their death is by the gas which escaped from the stove.

NICHOLS ASKS FOR WORK FOR THE JOBLESS

The unemployment situation in Boston is acute, Mayor Nichols said today, and he made an appeal to business men of the city to cooperate with as much as possible with the municipal employment bureau.

He also listened to the plea of a committee of Navy Yard employes for the hiring of more men in the yard. The early beginning of work on the James Mc. Vernon and Agassiz.

"I am sending 50 letters a day, many of them pitiable, from large business houses, asking that their workers are out of work," said the Mayor.

The top manual message to the City Council Monday I shall advocate the continuance of all possible municipal labor on streets and sewer projects and the start of other work which have been obstructed until spring.

"The situation is worse than last year at this time, and I wish to do all in my power to help families in distress. Business men should help by the belated duty and research and tools to see are even more insistent. We ought to do everything in our power to help those begging for work. Many are the business men of Boston who give on alms."

The visit to City Hall by a score of Navy Yard employes was the first that the men had made to the Mayor's office. Mr. Vernon and Agassiz are at the yard, but without an appropriation for repairing them the work will be delayed. Should the appropriation come immediately be started until October, it is said. Should the appropriation come in January, Mayor Nichols urged the retention of all employes during the interim.

Draeger Apparatus Big Aid to Victims

Safety devices used by the German navy for 15 years yet soon adopted by the United States would have saved the lives of the six men trapped in the torpedo compartment of the submarine S-5, according to Albert Holst, Roxbury man, who was a German submarine officer for five years.

The second article of Holst's series revealing German submarine safety devices and discussing their use in connection with the S-5 disaster follows.

By ALBERT HOLST,
Former German U-Boat Petty Officer.

TODAY I am going to tell you about the Draeger apparatus and how German submarine men use it to save themselves when rescue from other sources fails or is impossible.

Suppose the S4 was a German submarine. Suppose divers on their first descent did not attach the fuel and air lines to the special valves in the escape chamber.

Suppose almost three days of rough weather prevented further diving as it did in the case of the S4. Now, then, would these six men be left to die in the compartment?

They would not have been suffocated. They would have saved themselves. Lieutenant Graham Newell of the S4 would have been spared what must be a terrible story of suffocation and would not affect their own course because the United States navy did not provide them with the means.

Suppose the S4 had been a German U-boat would have saved themselves through the torpedo tube. The stern would have opened through a hatch provided at the top of every compartment of a German submarine craft.

That is where the Draeger apparatus comes into invaluable use. A combination divers suit and lifebelt, it imposes breathing while at the same time it absorbs the poisonous gases from the human body.

During the war the Draeger suit was instrumental in saving the lives of hundreds of German officers stationed in submarines sunk by gunfire or by the navies of the Allies.

The apparatus is simple in action. Despite the fact that there was a camp near the men prevents even a slight movement of the body.

CODMAN SEEKS TO ENJOIN NO. STATION ARENA

The contention that the Boston & Maine Railroad should not build a station including a coliseum to be used for prize fights was made today at an injunction hearing before Judge Pierce of the Supreme Court.

Edmund D. Codman, a stockholder of the railroad company, is seeking an injunction to restrain the Boston & Maine from erecting the new station in accordance with plans agreed upon by the directors.

Judge Pierce took the matter under advisement after hearing arguments and a master will pass upon the facts involved before it goes to the full court.

Frederick H. Nash of the railroad pointed out what the answer of the company contained and the real question ultimately to be decided by the full court. He said the answer admitted twenty-two of the allegations of the plaintiff's bill.

Referring to the proposed hotel and coliseum, Mr. Nash said the railroad had no intention of entering upon those projects until authority had been obtained from the Legislature.

AWAITING GOOD WEATHER TO ENTER S4

Provincetown, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—A heavy fog today held up salvage operations on the sunken submarine S4 until noon, when the diving ship Falcon left her berth in Provincetown Harbor and headed for the scene of the disaster.

As soon as the Falcon picked up the mooring lines over the S4 Captain Ernest F. King, directing the salvaging work during the absence of Rear Admiral Frank H. Brumby, planned to send divers W. J. Carr and John Kelley down to clear the silt in the second tunnel under the submarine's hull and pass through a rescue line.

Captain King indicated that no attempt would be made to enter the S4's hull today. Given favorable diving weather tomorrow, he said that the divers would be instructed to enter the submarine, recover any bodies of the S4's crew within easy reach and then close up the undamaged compartments before blowing the water out of them with compressed air.

TELLS WAY TO SAVE SUB MEN

nished through a rubber suction guard from which tubes run to bottles hanging at the waist. One bottle contains oxygen, the other compressed air. The air is fed from a rubber bag attached to the back.

The air purifier is made of chamois. The chamois may be changed every 24 hours to assure another long period of pure air. Additional compressed air may be obtained from the tanks in each of the torpedoes.

THROUGH TUBE

The donning of the Draeger apparatus is the first step of men who plan to save themselves through the torpedo tube. The inside door of the torpedo tube is then opened and one, two, three or four men enter. One man must of course remain behind in the compartment to work the machinery opening and shutting the doors.

When the men are inside the tube the inside door is closed and the outside door is opened. Water flows into the tube where the men lie yet, although submerged, they continue to breath fresh air.

The first man crawls to the open ing. He shoots to the surface, breathing the oxygen and compressed air as he ascends. So fast is his trip to the top that his body may be thrown completely out of water.

The others follow. The breathing apparatus saves them somewhat from the terrible pressure.

As the wearer reaches the surface he can discard the breathing suit simply by pulling a hook. This leaves him wearing a regulation life-belt.

PUMPS AVAILABLE

If more than one man still remains in the compartment the operation is repeated by closing the outside door and pumping the water from the tube. If the regular tube pump is disabled a small suction pump will serve the purpose.

Had the men on the S4 been equipped with Draeger or similar apparatus they could have saved themselves in the above manner. Five could have gone through the tube. One would have remained.

In the case of the S4 it would have been Fitch who would have stayed behind to work the mechanism. Fitch was the only officer alive.

Now then. If the S4 had been a German submarine, would Fitch, left alone in the torpedo compartment at the bottom of the sea, have saved himself?

Continued Tomorrow.

CHIEF M'GARR LEAVES WIDOW NOVEL WILL

Detailed instructions for the disposition of his estate, providing for every contingency that may arise, were left for his widow by John R. McGarr, former chief inspector of the Boston police department who died yesterday, it was learned today.

Knowing death to be at hand, Chief McGarr faced it calmly, and quietly made plans for the protection of his wife after he had passed on. In connection with instructions regarding his estate, he appended the names of certain of his many friends, lawyers, police officials and business men, who he stated would be glad to advise Mrs. McGarr.

In planning for his funeral, Chief McGarr lived up to the reputation he had established at headquarters of being averse to ostentation and show. He asked that no one send flowers, that there be no detail of honor from the police department such as is customary in the death of a ranking officer, and that the services be as simple as possible.

Accordingly it was stated that solemn requiem mass will be celebrated in the Catholic Church in Hyannis tomorrow morning at nine o'clock. The police department has detailed Inspectors Thomas Gleavey, George Farrell, John A. Dorsey, Stephen J. Flaherty, Timothy J. Donovan, Michael Kelley, Thomas Lyons and George Augusta, all of whom served under Chief McGarr, to attend the services as bearers and act as an escort for the body.

Following the services the funeral procession will proceed over the road to St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury, arriving at 12:30, where interment will take place.

5,000 DRIVERS TICKETED IN 2 DAYS IN 'AUTO'S HOME'

Detroit, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—A large portion of Detroit's motoring citizens are giving fairly good imitations of slow motion pictures this week, following inauguration of a police war on traffic law violators. In the first two days of the campaign more than 5,000 drivers have been "ticketed."

More than 800 policemen are assigned to present tickets to motorists who exceed 25 miles an hour. Thirty miles an hour costs $20 at the Traffic Violation Bureau.

N. E. To See Total Eclipse of Sun Aug. 31, 1930

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 30 (A.P.)—Quite a bit of New England will see the total eclipse of the sun in August 31, 1930, if the sky is clear, Professor Caroline Furness of Vassar College told a group of astronomers in conference at Yale University. She said totality will be visible over a track 100 miles wide crossing New England from Canada to Massachusetts Bay with the southwestern limit through Montreal and Salem, Mass.

Professor S. A. Mitchell of University of Virginia, a veteran, said his observations in Norway last year were spoiled by cloudy weather and this was the only time in seven expeditions he had had bad luck.

U.S. PROSPERITY IN ITS INFANCY, SAYS SCHWAB

New York, Dec. 30 (I.N.S.).—America is enjoying widespread prosperity and the future looks even brighter, Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, declared today.

"No optimist is required to sense the continuing forward course of American business," said Schwab. "This is no country for prophets of gloom.

"How many so-called saturation points have already been passed at full speed! We are a progressive people. The possibilities of growth and development have yet to be plumbed.

"Improvements in processes and products have reached a high degree of perfection, but we have only begun to explore the field of economic distribution and selling. This is a necessary phase of developing our production, is industry's immediate problem.

Schwab said wages today are high; that there is a job somewhere for nearly every man. Furthermore, he asserted, the farmer is coming into his own.

The improved economic position of the American wage earner is one of the significant facts of the day, he said, adding:

"American prosperity is not only real, but so widespread as to permeate every walk of life. My own belief is that the future holds even more in store for us."

SEIZE TWO MEN AS SLAYERS IN HUB RUM WAR

A report by Inspector Dennessey, homicide expert, disclosed, however that powder burns were on the back of Donovan's neck, and that one of the bullets, a steel-jacketed slug, was found imbedded in the wood work of the car above the wind shield at the window-opening and had entered upward as if fired low from the right-hand rear seat.

Police found, along the course of the chase, a 38-calibre pistol from which three bullets at similar type had been fired. The captives disclaimed ownership of the gun.

Donovan, who was father of two children, was dead when he reached the City Hospital in a police patrol, in which Rocco and O'Donnell also rode on their way to be booked.

Medical Examiner Timothy Leary in a post-mortem examination stated that death was due to two bullets which lodged in his head and that he was shot from behind. One entered the right eye, passed across the jaw and out through the left side of the neck. The other penetrated the right side of the back of the neck and furrowed across the left front of the neck.

DISCUSSED RUM DEAL.

Telltale blood stains on the vest of Rocco were strong factors in his being linked with the murder police said. Both denied they were the slayers and maintained that accomplices in another machine nearby at the time were the guilty ones.

According to the evidence pieced together by Captain Livingstone and his squad, Donovan met the pair by telephone appointment at a suite at No. 358 Columbus avenue.

They met to discuss a deal on 40 gallons of alcohol. Rocco and O'Donnell, which name police claim is an alias, sat in the rear of Donovan's sedan and the latter at the wheel.

The trio then drove to Roxbury Crossing and after further debate went to South Boston. A heated squabble over the price of the "alky" then broke out, police declare.

The auto reached A and West Third streets at the height of the argument. A pistol flashed three times in the darkness and Donovan lurched forward against the wheel, dead. Two of the bullets had taken effect, but police found no trace of the third.

Two dapper young men, attired in the height of fashion, leaped from the car and fled. But rounding the corner at that instant were Officers Maloney, Olsen and Murphy who were on the way to their beats

CAPTURE PAIR.

Aroused by the firing they took after the pair and captured them in an alleyway off West Third street. Using their flashlights they found a gun the chamber of which indicated that three bullets had been fired.

At the Athens street station the men were questioned, and one, at least, was known to have a record. Captain Livingstone arrived and aided in the examination. He declared that Rocco was the one who fired the gun, and that the man had been implicated in four other previous bootleg murders.

The argument which resulted in the tragedy, centered about the price of the alcohol which was around $4.50 a gallon.

At the home of Donovan a bereaved mother, wife and two young boys became hysterical as news of Donovan's death was broken to them. They said that he had lived in mortal fear of a mysterious person for months, and he indicated that he would be shot to death.

WIDE PROBE LOOMS.

Branded as the most abhorrent slaying in that section of the city, it may result in a wide inquiry into bootlegging and "still" industries in South Boston. A brother of the victim stated that many persons high up there are involved in the liquor traffic.

Donovan's mother said he left home at 6 o'clock last night and phoned an hour later asking whether anyone had called for him. She told him a man had called by telephone saying he wanted to see him. "I'll be home in an hour," said Donovan. He never returned.

Donovan, according to police records, served a three to five-year sentence in State Prison for killing Edward F. Coffee on the night of June 26, 1915. Coffee was stabbed in the back.

Police later arrested Donovan at the Columbus, O., jail, where he was serving a short term for some crime in Toledo.

He also served a sentence in the House of Correction for hitting with a brick former Special Officer Joseph Mattey, while Mattey was arresting him in the Fenway.

There is also record of a wild battle in the South Station waiting room between Donovan and a companion and Police Inspectors James Claffin and Benjamin Alexander, who was killed in the Pickwick Club crash.

Police have five arrests recorded against Rocco and carry him under the alias "Mickey the Wise Guy." According to the police, Rocco is the last of the Maresca brothers North End gang. His first arrest was in August, 1916. Others were in February, 1922; April, 1922; February, 1923, and February, 1924.

LYNN CONTROL OF DOGS GOING TO BOW-WOWS

The first step by the State toward compelling Mayor Ralph S. Bauer and the city of Lynn to comply with its demand for restraining all dogs for a ninety-day period was taken today.

Order action taken by the State, Lynn authorities have seven "days of grace," after which their powers in respect to dogs will, according to State Director of Animal Industry Frank B. Cummings, be usurped by the Commonwealth.

Director Cummings today mailed to the Lynn inspector of animals the order of the Governor's Council which gives the State power to enforce a dog restraining in any city or town where local authorities fail to lend their aid. This power carried an amendment requiring Lynn authorities to post this order conspicuously in public places.

HUNT TAXI MAN IN KILLING OF ACTRESS

New York, Dec. 30 (I.N.S.).—A taxicab driver was sought by the police today in the hope that he could throw some light on the mysterious death of Mrs. Mary Harrington, 29, a vaudeville actress. She was beaten to death, the authorities believe.

Her body, clad in silk pajamas and silk dressing gown, was found in her room, the walls of which were splattered with blood. There were several wounds about her face and head, indicating she had been struck with a sharp instrument.

The police were informed that a blue taxicab had been parked frequently in front of her apartment. When her husband, Guy Harrington, actor-manager, playing in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., was informed of his wife's death, he exclaimed:

"It's that taxi driver."

LIKE DOT KING CASE.

Harrington said his wife, who recently brought suit for divorce and won an uncontested action for $10,000, although the final decree has not been granted, had received attentions from other men.

Her death, police said, was similar to the baffling murders of "Dot" King and Louise Lawson.

Mrs. Harrington's dressing gown was bloodstained and there was blood on the floor. No weapon was visible, however. Search of the apartment indicated her diamond ring and other jewelry were missing. She had advertised to sublet her apartment while she visited her mother, Mrs. Bertha Briswalter, in Joplin, Mo.

HUSBAND TO REMARRY.

In addition to the taxicab driver the police are seeking a city employe, who, neighbors said, called at the apartment in response to the advertisement and said he would return the following day with his wife.

The Harringtons have been separated for nearly two years. Mrs. Harrington also appeared on the stage under the names of Gus Waters and Emma B. Harrington. Her husband was to have married Mrs. Grace Lake, of Binghampton, N. Y., early in January, following the filing of the final decree of divorce.

"Boiled Cabbage" Gets Municipal Court in Uproar

Cabbage was balled, not boiled, but a laughing query as to the latter nearly resulted in a witty gentleman being tossed out of Municipal Court today.

They couldn't pick out the wit, however!

Thomas Cabbage of the South End was being arraigned on a robbery charge when Judge Sullivan asked: "Is Cabbage balled?"

"No, Cabbage is bailed," the unidentified voice chortled.

Court officers scanned the bench vainly for the guilty one, as Judge Sullivan set Cabbage's bail at $1,000.

POLICE ASSERT YOUTH ADMITS SCHOOL BREAKS

After a grilling at the hands of officers of the Fields Corner station today, Percy L. Allen, 23, of Coffey street, Dorchester, confessed police said, to a number of school burglaries in the district and to an attempt to loot the new Dorchester courthouse.

The latter job proved his downfall when he slid down a 25-foot pillar into the arms of Patrolmen Roderick. Allen was a contestant in the Ontario swim last summer.

Special Officers Monohan and Brabazon said he related details of breaks at the Minot School, Rochambeau school, St. William's Parochial school, Mather grammar school and the Grover Cleveland school.

In the latter $170 in money and $80 worth of tools were missing at the time of the break.

A record of a six-months sentence in the House of Correction was uncovered when he was taken to head quarters to be fingerprinted.

The break in the courthouse that resulted in his capture last night netted him but 50 cents, a checkup revealed today. Though desks and doors were jimmied throughout the building, two quarters in the drawer of Assistant Clerk Frederick Simmons was the only thing taken.

Allen will be arraigned in Dorchester court tomorrow.

Washington, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—Professor Frederick M. Taylor, University of Michigan, author of "Principles of Economics" and other texts on the subject, today was elected president of the American Economic Association.

HOBOKEN PIERS AND SHIP BURN; MILLION LOSS

Hoboken, N. J., Dec. 30 (A. P.).—The Clyde and Mallory line steam ship Seneca, two 700-foot piers and eight barges were destroyed today by fire that swept two square blocks along the river front. The loss was estimated at $1,458,000 including $200,000 in salvage claims.

The Hudson River liner Hendrik Hudson, her bow aflame, was towed to midstream, where fireboats extinguished the blaze. A pier of the Lackawanna Railroad was a total loss.

The fire, caused by explosion of gasoline on a pier of the Fletcher Drydock Company, spread quickly to the Lacakawanna pier, where the Seneca had been moored since September. The vessel, valued at $750,000, was burned to the water's edge. Latterly a New York to Miami liner, she carried 283 passengers and freight. She was 399 feet long, had a 49-foot beam and was of 2,962 tons gross.

Several other vessels at dry docks and other piers were towed to safety in midstream.

The Lackawanna pier was leased by the Elasticap Corporation and $50,000 worth of merchandise was stored there. This company is managed by Arthur Bruce, adviser to Clarence D. Chamberlin, transatlantic aviator.

The Seneca, reconditioned six years ago, was built in 1894 as the Rawlins, first electrically driven passenger vessel. Successively the Powhatan, the Cuba and the Seneca, she was used by the United States navy as a troop transport during the war, was sunk by a submarine and raised agin.

STEAMSHIP DIRECTORS CLEARED IN STOCK CASE

Directors of th Crowell & Thurlow Steamship Company acted in good faith in making loans to the Atlantic Coast Company, but some of them made an unwarranted profit of $93,640 in connection with a stock division of the Atlantic Coast Company, it was reported to the Superior Court today by William Harold Hitchcock, who sat as master in a bill in equity brought by Paul J. Berteleon, receiver of the steamship concern.

The receiver sought to hold the directors of the company individual ly liable in connection with the Atlantic Coast Company transactions, but the matter reported they committed no breach of their proper duties. The "unwarranted profits" might be recovered by a bill in equity filed by the Atlantic Coast Company, he stated.

GEN. DOREY ARRIVES TO SUCCEED BARNUM

Brigadier-General Halstead Dorey, a thrice-wounded hero of two wars, today reported to the Army Base to assume command of the 15th U. S. Infantry Brigade, succeeding Major-General Malvern Hill Barnum, retired.

He was for some years aide to the late Major-General Leonard Wood. He was wounded in the Philippines in 1903 and twice wounded in the World War at Montfaucon where he commanded the 4th Infantry.

His regiment captured four towns on the advance from the Marne to the Ourcq, and General Dorey was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism and the French War Cross with palm leaf and two gilt stars. He is an officer of the Legion of Honor.

KELLOGG DENIES BRITAIN OPPOSES GUN ELEVATION

Washington, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—Reports that the British government was objecting to the raising of the main battery guns on American battleships prompted Secretary Kellogg to depart from a usual custom today to authorize this directly quoted denial: "My attention has been called to a press report that the British government had elevated its guns after the Washington treaty and then had objected to the United States doing the same. This is a mistake. The British government informed the United States it had not elevated its guns and this department and the Navy Department are satisfied this is correct. The British government is not now objecting to the United States gun elevation."

GIRL PLEADS GUILTY TO FORGERY CHARGE

Virginia James, 23, of Montreal, who at the time of her arrest for forging and uttering claimed her downfall to have been due to a misplaced love for a Boston tobacconist, today pleaded guilty in Municipal Court and was held in $2,000 for the Grand Jury.

Told that at least two of the eight charges would have to go before the Grand Jury, the girl replied: "I would just as soon have them all go up and have it over there." Inspector Stephen L. Flaherty appeared against the young woman, stating she had no visible means of support.

DOCTOR HELD IN MURDER OF CANVAS SACK VICTIM

Los Angeles, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—Dr. Charles M. McMillan, a physician, was arrested here charged with slaying Mrs. Amelia Appleby, whose body was found sewed in a canvas sack just outside the city.

The woman was known to have possessed valuable property including an apartment house in Chicago and the officers said the motive was the desire of her accused slayer to obtain title to this.

FALL RIVER MILL TO CUT WAGES 10 P. C.

Fall River, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—The Stevens Manufacturing company, employing about 500 operatives and specializing in fancy cotton weaves, today announced a ten per cent reduction in wages, effective Jan. 2. The mills will close from Dec. 30 to Jan. 2.

Briton Chained, Beaten in Foreign Legion

London, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—John Harvey, the young Englishman recently pardoned by the French Foreign Legion after being sentenced to eight years' imprisonment for desertion, is quoted today by the Evening Standard as saying he "now has no illusions about the Foreign Legion."

"Scenes which I am told are in 'Beau Geste' only begin to tell you what life is like," Harvey is quoted as saying.

"I have been kicked by officers and have been kicked while lying down with my hands and feet in chains. I have crawled about the desert with a thirst that would almost break a man's heart. I witnessed scenes of such barbarity in French prisons that seem incredible. Now, that they are behind me, do you wonder why I am so bitter about the Foreign Legion?"

Harvey was released unconditionally from the Foreign Legion after the British Foreign Office intervened.

Saville Made President

Andover, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—Marshall H. Saville of New York, professor of American archaeology at Columbia University, was elected president of the American Anthropological Association today.

MILTON CHAUFFEUR FOUND DEAD IN GARAGE

Milton police awaited a doctor's report today on the death of Harry Ellis Briggs, forty-eight, of Thatcher street, Milton, found dead in a garage near his home apparently from carbon monoxide gas.

Briggs, chauffeur for James C. Noble, Milton real estate operator, was seen entering the garage by his wife yesterday afternoon. Seven hours later the body was found.

will be the show window for

THE INDUSTRIES OF ALL NEW ENGLAND

NEW ENGLAND, with a population of over 8,000,000 people, is one of the wealthiest areas of its size in the world—richest in per-capita wealth—in educational, cultural and aesthetic facilities—richest in highly skilled labor—and richest of all in the diversity and magnitude of its 20,000 industries. On these things are based the prosperity of New England.

The New England Building, Inc., Park Square district, Boston, will be the show window wherein the world may view New England's vast array of industrial products! Here's the embodiment of one of those great ideas by which cities grow greater and prosperity spreads afar. Here's a project which has been characterized as the greatest contribution to the commercial and industrial development of New England in two generations.

The widening of Stuart street opened the way. Paine, John Hancock, Statler, Ritz-Carlton, Salada, Consolidated Gas, Motor Mart, Metropolitan and Elks—linked with these names great buildings, successful enterprises and unnumbered people began to make modern Boston as great and fine as its three-century record of leadership and achievement. The district around the Park Square Building, largest in New England, soon became the scene of a spectacular demonstration of the New Era in New England's business and industrial progress.

And now comes the largest building in the world—the New England Building, Inc. Opposite the Park Square Building, next door to Paine's and the Hotel Statler, this great headquarters building for retail and industrial business will occupy the entire block bounded by St. James avenue, Berkeley and Stuart streets.

Here more than ten acres of floor space will be reserved for industrial corporations to use as central sales-and-exhibition headquarters. Here, under the direction of Chester I. Campbell, veteran manager of great expositions, will be established a permanent, public New England Industrial Exhibition. As the show window of New England industries this great building will put within reach of tourists, transients, technical men, investors, buyers and the general public a more graphic and convincing presentation of New England industries than could be gained by weeks of travel from place to place.

This means a new stimulus to business which will reach out all over New England. It means one more tremendous addition to the increasing list of things that give more and more people annually good reason for coming to Boston and New England. This means not only a modern business improvement for the industries but increasing patronage for the retail stores, the hotels, restaurants, amusement places, railroads and steamship lines whenever the influence of this great enterprise touches remotely upon the personal interest of anyone who sets out Boston-bound.

Consider the unmatched modern conveniences of the New England Building, Inc.—elevator service to underground passages leading directly to the Arlington-Berkeley street station of the Boylston street subway—surface car and bus lines—the Worcester-Framingham interurban line passing on Berkeley street—the close proximity of the Back Bay, Trinity Place and Huntington avenue railroad stations—freely moving traffic in a well planned, populous neighborhood.

Park your car in the basement—and take an elevator. There'll be two sub-basement parking spaces—equivalent to 4½ miles of curb parking space—to accommodate from 3,000 to 5,000 automobiles per day for occupants and patrons of the building.

It is proposed to construct a tunnel under Columbus avenue leading from the building direct to a railroad siding and warehouse where all freight will be received and from which retail delivery trucks will operate.

In total floor area the New England Building, Inc., will surpass such famous structures as the General Motors Building in Detroit, the Graybar, Equitable Life and the gigantic Telephone building in New York.

Because of the great area of the site, the architects have been able to plan a building modern and monumental in character, yet with a total cubic contents considerably less than that permitted by the present Boston building-height regulations for a site of this size. The building thus gains greatly in beauty and distinction without having the characteristic sky-scraper tendency to increase street congestion by concentrating too many people on a small ground area. It will be Boston's first important building in the distinctly modern and American architectural style.

It is in this building that the New England Department Stores, Inc., will utilize more than 10 acres of floor space on the first five floors and first basement for the establishment of America's finest and most completely equipped department store. Yet, so huge is the building, there will be space for 20 additional independent specialty stores on the ground floor.

It is estimated that 25,000 New England families will share in the ownership of this most modern of all department store enterprises. For further information write to us or call at our executive offices. The New England Department Store, Inc. Executive Offices, Third Floor, Metropolitan Building, Boston. 260 Tremont Street, Tel. ROBERTS-CONVERSE WEDDING MOST DISTINCTIVE, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

A COMPANY NOT SO VERY LARGE AS WEDDING COMPANIES GO, BUT EVER SO IMPORTANT and distinguished, gathered for yesterday's noonday nuptials in St. Paul's in Dedham, where the solemn rites of matrimony transformed Miss Elizabeth Converse into the bride of Dr. Sumner Roberts. And for such an important alliance there was wedding pageantry of surpassing simplicity and dignity. The bride had but three attendants, her sister, Mrs. George A. McCook of Pasadena being chief of the trio that had two pretty girls to complete it, Miss Margery Richardson and Miss Virginia Roberts.

THE BRIDE'S ROBES WERE BEAUTIFULLY SIMPLE. SHE MIGHT HAVE STEPPED DOWN FROM an old family portrait to walk to the altar in shimmering white and some lovely old family laces that have figured in weddings of other Converse daughters. Very pleasing to the eyes were the bride attendants. How could it be otherwise, considering the pulchritude they possess and the art to wear smart frocks and hats becomingly. For their frocks was chosen the new Romanesque tone and right well did they become them.

SUPPORTING THE BRIDEGROOM WAS A BROTHER, FREDERICK ROBERTS, in chief place, and the usher squad included Paul C. Cabot, son of the Henry Cabots of Chestnut Hill, who married Miss Virginia Converse and so is a brother-in-law of yesterday's bride. Dr. Roberts also included in his service some brother professionals. Dr. Fuller Allbright of New York was one and Dr. Edward Pearson of Salem, another. After the ceremonial there was a wedding breakfast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Converse in Westwood.

A DAUGHTER OF THE FREDERICK CONVERSES WEDDING with a son of the Odin Roberts allies two lines distinctly azure blooded, with a definite place in the social sun. But quite aside from proud inheritance and family prestige, these two interesting young exponents of present generation career seeking are carving out their own special niches of achievement. Dr. Roberts is a rising young M. D. and his bride has amply demonstrated that a facile touch with oil and water color is hers. She was one of the Museum School's most promising students, and carried off several prizes.

SCORE ANOTHER GOOD MARK FOR MRS. THORNDIKE D. HOWE, who has steered another benefit into the good harbor of financial success! "Nanook" at the Exeter Street Theatre brought out all youthful Back Bay; the little people absorbed the story with all the blissful thrills that were to be expected. The Vincent Hospital is the financial beneficiary. Mrs. Howe is one of the board of that fine old institution, I believe a newcomer to it, and so the more beat on putting over a most successful benefit. She did just that. The theatre was "sold out."

IT'S THE THING TO CELEBRATE THE HOLIDAYS! SOME CELEBRATE in town. Some pack up smart Winter togs and go North ward to Quebec. Some take in the glistening surfaces of lake and glittering toboggan runs nearer home. But celebrate the day they all do. The Phineas Shaw Spragues have a houseful of young people at Lake Placid, headed by their own two lively daughters, Miss Elizabeth Sprague, who is out, and Miss Sally Sprague, still a schoolgirl and yet to experience the debutante thrill. Lake Placid for the Spragues is regular New Year fare. They've done this same thing other Winters.

METROPOLITAN GLAMOUR AND BRIGHT LIGHTS CALL strongly to Miss Berthe Braggiotti as proper setting for New Year's celebration. The more strongly, of course, as her dearest friend, Miss Rosamond Pinchot, is her hostess for a Manhattan interlude. Miss Pinchot is the talented and beautiful daughter of Mrs. Minturn Pinchot and a most important addition (not merely a society recruit) to the drama, or spectacle rather, that is Reinhardt's contribution to the current metropolitan stage. A very lovely member of the "Midsummer Night's Dream" is Miss Pinchot. Boston has seen her frequently, as professionally, as guest of Miss Braggiotti.

MISS BRAGGIOTTI IS CAUGHT up in the giddy metropolitan swirl—there is an opera party on the cards for Monday evening; Mrs. Pinchot entertains at two dinners for her daughter and her daughter's guest, and a certain ardent swain, most assiduous in his attentions, is filling up available moments with luncheons, teas and supper club dancings. Miss Braggiotti returns home early next week. And not so very long afterwards the lovely Miss Pinchot will, in all probability, be in town also, that time when the Reinhardt production goes on for a week at the Opera House.

PROFESSIONAL DUTIES ADMIT of little indulgence in the merely frivolous, 'tis true. Nevertheless, when there's a will the way is always to be found, even in the most inflexible stage schedule. Miss Pinchot will be much feted while she is here. Incidentally, the talented Braggiotti family has a recruit to the local stage in the person of Herbert Braggiotti, who is the spouse of the former Mary Crandon Smith and pater to a brand new small member of the Crandon-Braggiotti clan, on whom all manner of Christmas and New Year celebrations center. The young Herbert Braggiotti spent a year in Paris following their romantic marriage.

MEXICAN DELAY ON CLAIMS IS ALARMING

Washington, Dec. 30. — Grave alarm was felt by American claimants that it is the purpose of the Mexican government to deprive them of hundreds of millions of dollars by delaying settlement of claims for the murder of their relatives and confiscation of their property until it is impossible to prove the cases.

This danger was pointed out recently by the Wall Street Journal of New York, in an editorial commenting upon an article in the London Economist, a British financial paper of the highest reputation.

The Economist shows that Mexico, in 1927, in order to forestall foreign intervention, promised indemnification for all damages suffered since the Madero regime and then failed to fulfill the promises.

NOTHING BUT PROMISES.

"This corresponds with the experience of American citizens whose property has been looted, themselves killed or injured, or members of their families murdered," was the comment of the Wall Street Journal. It went on to say that despite the pretense of the Mexican government to settle American claims "we have the promises, but nothing more." It continued:

"As a part of the first agreement, the United States recognized Mexico's government. Then Mexico repudiated its agreement and went on its course of confiscation. One commission to deal with damages for killing of Americans was made up of a Mexican, an American and a Brazilian, who acted as umpire. The Santa Ysabel case was taken up. This was claims for damages for the death of seventeen, fifteen of them American engineers, who, going in to Mexico on the assurance of General Obregon, were murdered in cold blood by Villa.

SUSTAINED BY UMPIRE.

"Mexico raised the quibble that Villa was not a revolutionist but a bandit, and, therefore she was not responsible. The Brazilian umpire sustained the contention. The decision was so raw that the United States commissioner withdrew. The Brazilian, accompanied by his niece, returned home. According to a Pernambuco newspaper, at a reception someone admired a beautiful string of pearls the young woman wore, and she naively said, 'A present from President Calles.'

"Another commission at work in Washington for three years has acted on twenty comparatively small claims. There are about 2,400 more to be considered. Not a peso will be paid if Mexico can avoid it. Mexico is steadily pursuing its agrarian policy. She has already taken over half a million acres of American-owned agricultural lands, preferably those highly developed. Up to this time not one acre has been paid for."

2 HURT, 9 SAVED AT BLAZE IN LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Dec. 30.—Nine persons, including six women and a child were carried down ladders to safety today when fire, for the second time in 40 hours, swept through the Oppenheim block at Nos. 491-499 Essex street, in the centre of the retail district.

A rigid investigation by State officials was asked by Fire Chief Michel McPhee, and started immediately by H. M. Whittemore of the State fire marshal's office.

A general alarm called all apparatus to the scene and firemen had a stubborn fight to save adjoining buildings. Damage to the block was estimated at $60,000.

Eight of those rescued were saved from the roof o an adjoining building to which they had fled, hoping to escape from there to the street, only to be trapped.

More dramatic even than this rescue was the thrilling escape of Cleo Moran, 25, who slid down four stories on a rope fire escape. When he reached the ground the flesh of his hands was torn to shreds and he collapsed.

Two firemen were injured.

The Oppenheim block is a four-story brick structure, housing several stores on the ground floor, offices on the second, and the Ideal Chambers, a forty-room apartment house on the third and fourth.

Ending a week's stay in the South Boston navy drydock at the cost of over $250,000, the Leviathan, queen of the United States Shipping Board fleet, sailed for New York late today after her semi-annual overhaul. The repairs consisted of overhauling the engine room and scraping and painting the hull.

MAN BURNED TRYING TO SAVE HIS CATTLE

Sutton, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—In a vain effort to save cattle in a blazing barn, George Tochy, forty, was seriously burned today when fire destroyed the structure, burned to death ten head of cattle and threatened the Tochy reddience. Tochy was taken to a Worcester hospital with burns about the body. The fire damage was placed at $3,000.

SMOOT URGES ADOPTION OF SALES TAX

Washington, Dec. 30 (I.N.S.).—With the new tax reduction bill definitely "pigeon-holed" in the Senate for three months at least Senator Reed Smoot (R.) of Utah, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, today revived talk for adoption of a national sales tax as a substitute for all federal taxes.

The present uncertainty over how much revenue will be raised next year by existing taxes was cited by Smoot as an argument in favor of the sales tax.

The dispute between the House, which decided that a $200,000,000 slash in taxes could be allowed and the Treasury Department which held that only a $235,000,000 reduction could be allowed, presented another reason, said Smoot.

The Senate's financial leader predicted that the sales tax would be adopted ultimately because of its simplicity and equality of application and "probably within the next decade."

He estimated that a 1 per cent sales tax, applicable on the ultimate consumer, would produce an annual revenue of at least $1,000,000,000 with all other taxes—except the tariff—repealed.

It would apply to each individual said Smoot, in proportion to his purchasing power, thus scattering the Federal tax burden lightly upon the poor and heavily on the rich.

GUARD PRINCE OF WALES' PRIZE HERD FROM PLAGUE

Leeton, Nottinghamshire, Eng., Dec. 30 (A.P.).—Stable help, farm-workers and everybody else employed in an active capacity around the Prince of Wales' farm here was on the alert today in a fight to keep the foot and mouth disease away from his famous herd of prize shorthorns. This dread malady of cattle was spreading in Nottinghamshire and other Midland counties. A suspected case was discovered in the herd of a Wilfed farmer whose place is within a quarter of a mile of the Prince's land.

RUTH TALKS OF 'FOOLS': READS ABOUT SAINTS

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 30.—With but two weeks to live, unless Governor Alfred E. Smith intervenes, Mrs. Ruth Snyder discussed her "fan mail."

"The number of fools in the world, you know, is infinite," prison attaches quote her as commenting in connection with these letters.

Sing Sing attaches state that the number of "freak" letters is increasing as the execution date draws nearer.

Meanwhile she spends most of her time writing poetry and reading the lives of the saints. Joseph Lonardo and Dana Wallace, of her counsel, said Mrs. Snyder has become intensely religious and that her poetry is in a religious vein.

Wallace said the former Queens Village housewife also collects receipes and household hints from housekeeping magazines, explaining that it has become such a habit during her life at home that it was hard to forsake.

Edgar L. Hazelton and Joseph Lonardo, two of the attorneys who are conducting Mrs. Snyder's fight for life, visited her at the death house. It is reported that she is urging that more be done in her behalf, particularly in the way of legal notices.

SECOND SECTION

The Love Story of Emily Day of Dedham, by a Noted Writer of Romance

CHAPTER 16.

IT was late afternoon and three little girls were rushing along Grove street.

Skirts flying, high heels clicking, bare heads jerking with every dancing step. One head covered with light black ringlets much as Stella Brent's had been once; a brown one clipped short like a boy's.

A head with hair like curling flame. People stared at this one—turned and stared again. Little, rounded face, all mischief; long, yellow eyes under long dark lashes. Pale green dress, short, so very short; wide, thin sleeves floating behind gracefully, strikingly, in the breeze of hurry.

Insouciance, an air of daring like a challenge about the small figure. And with it all a rare beauty drawing as a magnet.

Kathryn Day, called Kitten by those who loved her and thought long, anxious thoughts about her.

Dottie Brent and the forbidden Flossie Gaines.

Three girl-kids going out to meet adventure, seeking it in unlikely places, all a-quiver with eagerness.

Three youngsters who considered life a bright thing to be tossed back and forth from one hand to the next.

"Look, Floss, the shebk in the big car. Oh, he's smiling. What d'you spose he's doing out ali by himself?"

"It's the Norris car—you know that's their place up on the Fron!

Dusky Bride Sues 'Kip' Despite 'True Love'

Gains in Divorces as News Is Banned

London, (A.P.)—English sociologists are expressing alarm at the great increase here in the number of divorces. The attorney-general, Sir Douglas Hogg, has just reported that in eleven months in 1927, 3,818 divorces were granted, this number exceeding the total for the whole of 1926 by 270.

Three causes are given for the jur.p. One is the regulation passed this year that newspapers are permitted to publish only a small skeletonized report of a divorce case.

Another is the alteration of the law which now enables women to obtain a divorce on the sole ground of a husband's misconduct.

ASKS $1000 MONTH AS ALIMONY

New York, Dec. 30 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander has commenced suit for separation from her husband, Leonard Kip Rhinelander, heir to $100,000,000, it was learned today.

The New York society man's dusky wife alleges cruelty, inhuman treatment and abandonment in her summons and complaint.

Papers in the suit are on file at White Plains, N. Y. Sheriffs of three counties in the metropolitan district have received a copy of the papers, but Rhinelander is believed to be in Louisiana and copies of the summons and complaint have been mailed to authorities there, on the possibility that the Supreme Court here will grant Mrs. Rhinelander's appeal for privilege of service by publication.

Judge Samuel W. Sutherland, Mrs. Rhinelander's attorney, said she would seek alimony of $1,000 a month. She is now receiving $200 a month from Rhinelander.

The Rhinelanders were married in 1924. A month after the wedding "Kip" began an unsuccessful suit to annul the marriage. A jury at that time held that Rhinelander had not been deceived by his bride and decided that he knew all during his courtship that she was a mulatto.

At the home of her father, a New Rochelle, N. Y., postman, Mrs. Rhinelander today said she still loves her husband, but that a legal separation was inevitable.

"I love Leonard with all my heart," she admitted wistfully. "I will always love him. We are separated, but stone walls cannot separate true love and distance lends enchantment to the view."

Quite coyly, then, Mrs. Rhinelander wispered a secret.

"Right here, in my own room, just back of a photograph of Leonard, there stands a vase filled with the most beautiful roses. He sent them to me on Christmas Day, and they are as fresh today as when I got them."

Then she revealed another secret.

"For more than two months I have been collecting material for a book that I am writing about my experiences with Leonard," she said.

"That is taking up all my time now and will keep me busy until I am ready to leave on my trip to Europe next Summer."

NAB ROMEO IN GIRL'S ROOM

Although only a poor romancer at best, Motorcycle Officer Daniel Sweeney of Revere made a direct hit with an impulsive Romeo today, scoring a bullseye on an insurance man coming upstairs.

Motorcycle Officer Sweeney had been found hiding under a girl's bed.

It seems there were two sweethearts. There was the balcony wooing at the window, and all, and the ardent swain skinning up the front porch with large sighs and gestures.

They may be called Romeo and Juliet to save embarrassment—Romeo living on the first floor, Ittlewold Juliet on the second, with a mad mamma forbidding Romeo the flat and daughter.

So Romeo has been wont to shinny up the porch, tap on his lady's bedroom window and then sit, shivering in the chill breeze and with a fond arm hooking the sill—conversing in soft, sighing whispers.

They call it love!

Juliet's mamma discovered the ruse, but Romeo refuses to give up his visits. She told the police and Officer Sweeney figured it would be a good idea to hide under Juliet's bed while Juliet was kept in another part of the house.

In the shadowed room he waited, but Romeo fooled him, coming up the stairs instead and softly opening the door, called out, "Juliet! Juliet."

Sweeney coyly waved his hand from beneath the mattress and felt it patted.

"Why, Juliet, what big hands you have!" exclaimed the youth

"The better to grab you with, mon ami," cooed Sweeney, wriggling his chubby chassis into the opening as he clutched the wrist.

There was difficulty immediately, with words and music, but Romeo, instead of accepting kindly advice, insisted on fighting in a crude, unromantic way. So they swayed to and through the door, stumbled—and Romeo went down the stairs.

An insurance man was just ascending and he was almost rubbed, suffering lacerations and abrasions to his hat and having difficulty getting the Sweeney coat off his face again.

But Romeo was cured and he departed back to his own door.

FIGHT ON LEASE LOST BY MARY BOYLE O'REILLY

Although exonerated of fradulent misrepresentation or exercise of undue influence, Mary Boyle O'Reilly, authoress and daughter of the renowned John Boyle O'Reilly, today, in Superior Court at East Cambridge, lost her fight to compel the owner of her Newton home to give her a long lease with privileges of purchase at the assessed valuation.

In dismissing her bill of complaint, Judge Franklin T. Hammond made a finding of fact in which he upheld all the claims of Miss O'Reilly and rejected statements made by the aged owner of the property, Edward H. Frye.

Judge Hammond also decreed that a decision should not affect a possible claim by her for $1,400 expended on repairs to the house in Duffield road, Auburndale.

Frye had asserted his tenant was guilty of fradulent misrepresentation and undue influence in extracting promises from him regarding a lease and privilege of purchase. Judge Hammond denied this claim and declared Frye voluntarily made the agreement both verbally and in writing.

But the court declared the agreement regarding purchase was so vague as to price and time that it could not be enforced, while the lease agreed upon was virtually a "lease at will" and therefore could be terminated by either party.

DE VALERA TO CONFER AT COPLEY-PLAZA MONDAY

The Massachusetts State Council A. A. R. I. R., announced today that Eamon de Valera will hold a public conference at the Copley Plaza on Monday, at 2 p. m. Deputations from various cities throughout the State will be present.

De Valera, who arrived in this country in time to spend Christmas with his mother in Rochester, N. Y., said he came here to make inquiries into industrial conditions and to promote a plan to found a Republican newspaper in Ireland. He expects to remain here until February 1.

APPEALS TO HUB POLICE TO FIND MISSING GIRL

Russell L. Ferguson of Warwick N. Y., appealed to Boston police today to find his daughter Bessie, nineteen-year-old senior of New York State Teachers' College, who vanished the day after Christmas. The next heard of her was a letter postmarked Albany, N. Y., sent from Boston with a request to the postmaster to forward it.

Bessie Ferguson

"I am employed here," the letter said. "There is nothing to worry about. I am a governess for two children, receive $100 per month and love my work. I hope I can continue."

ONE MAN STAGES HIS OWN RIOT IN CITY HALL

A one-man, personally-conducted riot threw girl clerks in the Penal and Institutions Departments at City Hall Annex into a frenzy today and started Michael O'Neil of the West End back to his old cell at Deer Island.

O'Neil, paroled for Christmas, called to report to Penal Agent Peter McGary, but suddenly became violent. Constable Philip Brennan took a punch on the jaw when he entered the office, and then O'Neil, a giant, punched out several panes of glass in the windows. O'Neil was finally handcuffed and taken to Milk street station.

4TH GILBERT PICTURE TODAY

Here is another chance to win a prize in the Josh Gilbert "Love" Contest.

Look at the picture printed above and then sit down and write the name of the film from which picture was taken, the leading person appearing with Josh in it and then, in not more than 5 lines, just why you like Josh Gilbert. The fourth screen "Love" is appearing this week in "Love" at Lowe's State Theatre.

The picture above is the fourth of the five that comprise the contest. The last will be printed tomorrow.

All you have to do is fill out the five pictures and send in all the names to the Boston Evening American. Mark your answers plainly and legibly.

Each of the five pictures has been cut out from one of the most current films that have been shown in many cities of late, so no one should have any difficulty in recognizing them. Prize pictures are just as interesting.

The first prize is a second, third, fifth and fourth prize, $2. In addition to the cash, a pair of tickets for Lowe's State Theatre will be awarded.

But remember in this and any solutions no one may submit more than a complete set of five names. A list of the winners will be published on Saturday. Send your answers to the Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, and Washington Square, Boston, Mass.

CAN YOU NAME THIS?

To win one of the prizes in the Boston Evening American John Gilbert "Love" contest you must name the film and tell who is with Gilbert.

Boston's first international amateur hockey test of the season is scheduled for tonight at the Arena, when Toronto Varsity, known as Varsity, intercollegiate champion of Canada since 1915, plays the University Club team, an outfit representing the cream of the amateur players in the United States.

Local fans have great faith in their team but the Toronto sextet is rated as the best amateur team in the Canadian dominion.

Those who like thrilling type of hockey should be in this game. The two clubs have no peers in the matter of hockey as played in these two fine amateur rinks. Fans who throw ever, thing into the attack fought

The point of attention is the big defense of the Toronto boys have held opponents to one goal in their last two games, while the locals have been working out three hours a week.

Art Coach Leon Tuck believes this advantage can be offset if unlimited use of substitutes is permitted tonight by Toronto. The local team has three cracking fine forward lines to shoot against Toronto with two pair of defense stars and two goalies

The Toronto team is here with a full flock of capable spares too. It will be interesting to see which team gets the jump, and the first period should produce some hair raising hockey.

The Toronto boys are here fresh from their 9 to 2 victories over Princeton varsity and are a team that can come right under the wire against two tigers in Old Nassau is playing here. Toronto uncovered a big surprise in Harvard, exceeded four times against Princeton, Toronto is a team well liked Doug Bryson, Dick Bertram, Henry Gordon to worry about on that wing

NOT ONLY THE RAFTERS BUT THE VERY FOUNDATION OF MECHANICS BUILDING WILL QUIVER TONIGHT When these young men start pummeling each other in the great heavyweight boxing carnival offered by Matchmaker Mack of the Argonne A. A. These seven represent three quarters of a ton of fighting men on tonight's card, the other seven furnishing the balance of 1½ tons. The fighters in this picture from left to right are Abe Kaplan, Eddie Callahan, Jack Gagnon, Hagan Hassan, Morgan Gardner, Big Bob Mack, sometimes called the Mack truck, and Roberti Roberti.

Coaches Oppose New Football Rules

New York, Dec. 30 (A.P.).—After sharp debate over the changes made early this year in the football rules, the American Football Coaches' Association today approved a recommendation to eliminate the alterations affecting use of the lateral pass and the recovery of fumbled punts.

The coaches voted in favor of returning to the 1926 rules affecting these features

As a result of the demand of the coaches for greater representation on the Rules committee for 1928, E. K. Hall, chairman of the committee, invited the association to appoint three observers to sit with the rule makers at the next meeting.

This was understood to be a compromise, inasmuch as the Rules Committee chairman has declared he felt that the coaches [illegible] adequate membership [illegible] reorganized yesterday [illegible] were placed on the committee. With the addition of three observers, the coaches will have representatives at rules discussions.

In voting to make two important changes in the rules the coaches took issue with Mr. Hall, whose report yesterday recommended a "status quo" in the game for next year.

The fight for these changes was led by Knute K. Rockne of Notre Dame and chairman of the coaches' committee on rules. Rockne expressed disagreement with Hall's contention that the game now has crystallized and that the rules need only some clarification and codification.

Opposing Mr. Rockne's views were led by two Michigan men—E. E. Wyman, head football coach, and Fielding H. Yost, athletic director, both declaring for a "hands off" policy on the present rules.

Rockne's recommendations, however, were sustained by the vote of the convention.

On the lateral pass question, the vote was 56 to 16 to eliminate the change in the rules which removed the risk from use of that offensive weapon.

The vote was 37 to 35 on the recommendation to return to the 1926 regulation on the fumbled punt. This was a change provided that a fumbled punt was dead at the point of recovery, but coaches felt that a change, under which two players could recover the ball, was more satisfactory.

The other changes made in the rules this year received overwhelming approval. These included [illegible] goal lines to goals to goal line.

GAMES TOMORROW

Dorchester vs. B. C. High
English vs. Hyde Park
Commerce vs. South Boston
Mechanic Arts vs. Jamaica Pla
East Boston vs. Latin.
Brighton vs. Trade.

Six school boy hockey games are carded for the Arena tomorrow morning, every one will be a hard-fought battle.

Boston College High is scheduled to start off the [illegible] with Dorchester. For this game a large school boy fans have awaited the clash and there is no doubt but a large gathering will be present to witness the contest.

Dorchester has a fast team this year as its games to date will show. It defeated the Boston College High team by a 3 to 1 score in the opening game of the season and has since defeated Latin by a 4 to 2 score. Dorchester has also played a tie game with the Mechanic Arts Crimson Tide and has defeated Jamaica Plain by a 3 to 1 score. Dorchester is also running on an even basis with Coach Denny discovered Paul Touhey as a goal tender.

Touhey was good at getting the puck, and since this is the position that has been troubling Dorchester, and in fact, the insertion of Touhey into the forward line has caused to be most critical of the season so far to rate the present Dorchester aggregation as the best school team in Boston.

DORCHESTER HAS EDGE

The Dorchester team has a number of stellar forwards in Wm. Ross Murray and Captain Jim Murray. Murray will be a star this year, the same as last year. The latter is a veteran of many years experience and is considered by many as the best player in the league. The latter is also a veteran of many years experience and is considered by many as the best player in the league. Dorchester has the edge.

Boston Latin after a week of practice on outdoor ice, is expected to take the Arena by storm and thus strengthen its hold on first place. This is considered a battle for the league championship, as Latin has a clean slate and is expected to make a clean sweep of the remaining games to make it a perfect two weeks.

SHIFT IN LATIN LINE

Coach Joe Clark, the Latin School mentor, has made a change in the team and it is expected that Captain Bernard Shea will be shifted from left wing to the defense position, while Joe Mc Mahon will be moved from left wing to center. Coach Clark has decided on this change for the purpose of bolstering up the defense, which has been weak in the past two games.

Both Shea and Mc Mahon are fast skaters and are considered the best defense pair on the team. Shea is a veteran of many years experience and is considered by many as the best defense player in the league. Mc Mahon is a newcomer to the game, but has shown great improvement in the past few weeks.

Latin has a strong team

Runyon Tells How Easy It Is to Drop Dough on Tijuana Race

By DAMON RUNYON

MR. OVERCOAT JACK ATKIN favors me with a copy of his first proclamation with reference to the Coffroth Handicap, the world's richest turf stake, which is to be decided at Tijuana on March 18, next.

Mr. Overcoat Jack is the author of the Future Book on the Coffroth Handicap, and he doesn't do badly with it, if anybody hauls off and asks you.

Mr. Overcoat Jack accepts wagers on the Coming Crosses, as we say in Alabama meaning the horses which are now listed to go in the Coffroth.

Of course it is fair to say that Mr. Overcoat Jack is not nominating any of the horses that will get a chance to start in the big race, but this is no skin off his nose, as he is getting just as much money for the privilege as if he were.

The Tijuana is owned by Mr. Charles Comptonelle Irwin of Cheyenne and I am inclined to think Tijuana will get to the post, or anyway I have made it so in my book.

Mr. Charles Comptonelle Irwin is not one to let an entry fee, a horse losing a leg or two, or anything from glanders to high birth things like that. I know of Mr. Irwin's stable like a fighter in Mr. Leo Pizzonious Flynn's barn. That is to say, he isn't there to merely eat hay.

CARLARIS IS IN.

I NOTE that Tijuana is 60, 12 and 12 in Mr. Overcoat Jack's book. I would strongly advise cutting this out, because it might befall that all the other entries get [illegible] leaving the Coffroth [illegible] for Tijuana, or [illegible] for 7 pesos. I have learned of [illegible] the odds in that [illegible] Mandan, [illegible] to become the [illegible] at the Coffroth. She is two-eight with Display and Grey Lag, while Carlaris is in there at 3-2. I'd like to see the entrance of Display face the barrier out in Mexico. I doubt if there is anything in the race that could catch him though I shudder to think of the remoteness to Mr. Overcoat Jack with Display quoted at 30, 12 and 6. Grey Lag is at 20, 8 and 4.

SOMETIMES HAS TO PAY.

YOU know Mr. Overcoat Jack does not always do has to pay off one of these long ones. Mr. Patty Anderson, who owns Carlaris, took 80 to 1 for quite a number of his dollars in the Atkin future book the year Carlaris looked to be the greatest three-legged thing that ever hooked through a bridle.

But in the main, of course, the bets can't guess em that far away. For instance, if the race was to-morrow, and Display, Mardi Gras and Dr. Clay were to go to the post, I might find me here Mr. Overcoat Jack out of better than even money. Nine out of ten times, Mr. Comptonelle Irwin's horse would be wearing the [illegible] but [illegible]

To try to make friends over is almost an impertinence. In it not, in self-righteousness? Measures of reform are best left to the impersonal efforts of consecrated preachers and reformers.

The average girl will find she is doing her full and marvelous share toward helping this old world onward if she sets an example by living up to her own ideals and standards, by showing friendly tolerance toward those who differ from her, by choosing friends representative of her idea of what is good and true and worth-while, and by marrying the finest young man of all and making him a happy, successful home.

SALLY'S SHOULDERS

by Beatrice Burton

Author of "The HOLLYWOOD GIRL" ETC—

The Story of a Clever Boston Girl and Her Temperamental Sister

CHAPTER XXXIV

FOR a minute it seemed to Sally that she must be dreaming. She stood there rooted to the spot wondering why Beau was packing a suitcase in the middle of the night.

Where was Jerome? Why was he getting ready to leave the house like a thief in the night?

Like a flash the answer wrote itself across Sally's quick brain. "Money!—It's because of money." She knew Beau and his great weakness.

Then, like a flash she was in the room, bending over him. At her light touch on his shoulder he jumped as if he had been shot, and turned quickly.

She faced Beau tensely. Her lips opened stiffly not to ask a question, but to state a fact.

"Beau, you've taken some more money! . . . Tell me how much." It seemed to her that she had known for weeks that this would happen.

She was not like a girl of 20 in that moment. She was a woman—with a woman's knowledge looking out of her blue eyes with their heavy shading of lashes.

But Beau wouldn't meet her look. His eyes went from one corner of the room to the other—from the floor to the ceiling. Finally he just flicked her with that shifty gaze of his.

"What do you mean, more money?" he asked bitterly. "When did I ever take any money?"

"Why, those bad checks you gave Ted Sloan," replied Sally, wondering how he could forget them, when she had only begun to pay them off for him.

"Oh, those!" His voice was shrill. "Aren't those ever going to be through threwing those up to me. I told you I'd have paid them off myself if you hadn't butted in."

For a minute Sally was speechless with surprise.

Then she began to understand. He—not he would never take the blame for anything, not even in his own thoughts.

Just as Mrs. Jerome preferred to think that her husband I left her because of another woman, instead of admitting that it was because he couldn't live the way she wanted to live—with unmade beds, hit-or-miss meals taken from cans or delicatessens, dust and untidiness.

"What's the trouble now, Beau?" Sally asked gently. "Please tell me—I'll try not to butt in, as you all it, this time. But maybe I can help."

She could see that he was in desperate trouble about something. He was like a hunted animal in his terror—afraid, almost, to tell his own sister what he had done.

He stood still for a minute, picking at his fingers nervously, looking around the cozy, familiar room as if it were some place that he never had seen before. Then suddenly he turned as if he were going to leave it.

But, just as suddenly, he swung back to Sally, and began to tell her what was wrong.

'I've Taken Some Money,' Beau Told Sally, With Defiance

"I've taken some money, see?" he asked, and his voice was low and hoarse. "From the bank where I work. I've just taken it. Get that through your head. Stolen it is what I mean."

Then he looked squarely at her with his blank-blue eyes, and there was defiance in his face.

"It's sure to be found out, and they'll come here for me—and that's why I'm going now. I'm not going to be arrested, and ruin Mabel's life for her, she's the one I'm thinking about—Mabel!" His voice broke on his small wife's name.

By the time he had finished speaking Sally was ready with her answer. "But, Beau, it isn't going to help matters for you to run away. It's going to make them all the worse."

Beau stared at her.

"What you've got to do," said Sally, thinking quickly and sharply, "is to stay right here and put back the money you've taken. It's much as it were how did you manage to get away with it?"

Beau's lips curled. "I don't trust you or anybody enough to give myself away to them," he said. "I haven't felt you how I got the money—but what I did was one grand."

"One grand? How much is that?" "A thousand dollars," explained Beau. "And it's all gone. I played the ponies with it—and lost it all, as usual! His bitterness was on his voice and face. "I always lose. I never get any kind of a lucky break."

"A thousand dollars," said Sally to herself. Her earnings for a whole year! The mere thought of it was paralyzing.

For two or three minutes she could not think of a thing to say. She stood looking intently into Beau's blank face. And he looked back at her, with his lips hanging loosely and his shoulders sagging.

"Well!" she said at last. "We'll have to get the money from somewhere. Won't we, Beau? And you'll have to put it back and get the job at the bank. It's no for you to work."

"I'll say it isn't," Beau answered. "When I see all the jack I'm around, and then think how Mabe wants a new dress and how I haven't got a single shirt with whole cuffs, I go kind of nutty, I guess—"

"You wouldn't have to have ragged cuffs if Mabel would mend them up once in a while!" Sally spoke sharply, for she was out of patience with Mabel. "And you know you can't afford that car of yours!"

Beau shrugged his shoulders and looked ugly. "Well, dont rub it in! Don't kick a guy when he's down," he growled ungratefully. "Where are you going to get that grand for me?"

"Aunt Emily," Sally told him. "If she has it, she'll lend it to me. I'm going to start working for her pretty soon, and I can pay it back to her if she'll just give me enough time."

Beau Knew That, Somehow or Other, They Would Save Him

Beau looked brighter. He knew that, somehow or other, his women folk would save him. They always had.

"Good night," he said briefly, and went to bed.

Sally tiptoed back to her own bed but she could not sleep. She lay awake, listening for the sound of a board creaking or a suitcase lock snapping. She was afraid that Beau might try to get away after all.

• • • •

The next morning at 8 o'clock Sally was at Aunt Emily's in Weston. Over the gate a wooden sign hung:

THE HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD
CHICKEN DINNERS SERVED

"By jinks, she's doing business already," said Sally to herself with an amused twinkle in her eyes.

"Well, if it isn't little Sally—Aunt Emily exclaimed when her niece stepped into the place. And what brings you way out here this morning?"

She always struck straight to the heart of things.

Sally was like her—direct and quick. "Money," said she. "Aunt Emily, would you lend me a thousand dollars and not ask what I want it for?"

Aunt Emily's fine, firm lips came together with a snap. "I would not!" she declared promptly and forcibly, "because I'd know what you want it for. For Mike—and for Beau! And they've had enough of my money, thank you!"

She got up and brushed the crumbs of her hands one against the other as she were washing her hands of the whole Jerome family.

She deposited a kiss on Sally's relieved forehead. "You know I'd give my niece Sally anything I had, don't you? But the rest of the family has had the last nickel I'll ever give them."

"Aunt Emily, I'm coming to work for you on the first of November, if you still want me," she said. "And I'll pay you back that money, somehow or other, if only you'll let me have it. Beau has got himself into some trouble—"

"I don't care what Beau's regard Jerome has done!" Aunt Emily shook her head vigorously. "I made myself poor to give to his father, and to everybody else in the family, and I'm through!" She brought her hand down flat and firm, on the edge of the table nearest her to show that she meant what she said. She stared her nonsisters.

"Well, where do I go from here?" she asked herself.

BRIGHT banners stir upon the breast of today down all the windings of the narrow street, to every eye they flaunt their message gay . . . and with good cheer each passer's glance they greet. Below the shadows lie as sombre still with in the confines of that ancient way the walls of stone rise up, as grim and chill, as were those shades, those walls on yesterday. Yet all is changed the banners here have wrought rare magic with their flying folds a gleam, such magic as a brave and happy thought can fashion in a shadowed spirit's dream. A brave and happy thought can like its wings against dull life like banners here that spread their glow until the raptured being sings, for getting every spectre, every dread.

The Return Engagement

"The Crowning Glory"

DRAWN BY
Nell Brinkley

DID you think it would last forever, the same sleek bob? Even bobs have varied and changed almost weekly, before our eyes! Did you think hair could stay the same always on any GIRL'S head?

Man's coiffeur seems to last his lifetime, as the rough tubes of his trousers do. But nothing that belongs to a woman's outer self is! For women weary of themselves looking one way too long. "Let me look in my mirror and see another lady!" she sings to the Goddess of Change.

The back of the head seen everywhere for some time, like a greyhound's back for closeness, would have changed long ago if the girls had had to look at it. For take notice how often in two years they have completely me amorphosed t[illegible]on of the front. And I know more than a dozen damsels who are weary unto death of the look of their heads in the back—with evening clothes.

For, listen, a smart young man has made this casual remark, not knowing that she was reading the way the minds of fashion were setting: "I'm letting MY hair grow. You see, I don't want to look like a gran mother. All the elderly WOMEN I know have them short, and I look exactly like them! Besides, I've never had long hair, my dear, and I'd LOVE to try it." You see? We forget that these youngsters have never had anything BUT short hair and they are bound by all the laws of change to have a crack at something new!

So you [illegible] for at least a time, and on your method of getting tided over the awkward age of your [illegible] hairs!

And again we may see the spectacle, so That Ch[illegible]-tree tells us, of the Peke or the Terrier dashing away with our locks of fame curls that we wear to cover the growing pains of our "back hair," and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] long forgotten. And instead of "two-faced," your girl may be two-headed, sleek up the back in the daytime—if she chooses to put her trust in a "transformation"—and luxuriantly curled about the neck of an evening.

Here are some ideas of how to meet the situation [illegible] comes.

dance road. Probably he's a relative."

"Well, he's looking back—"

Guess. Heads tossing, the black, the brown, the red. Three slender figures pausing before a house window, picking out among the reflections there that of the big car. It was loitering along the curb. The "chick" was leaning out, watching them intently.

"Well, for goodness' sake—"

"Oh, shut up, Kitten. It was you gave him the joyful eye."

Kitten drew herself up stiffly and turned a cold look upon the others. It was a scathing burlesque of dignity. "I'll thank you to remember I'm not that kind of a girl, if you'll please be so kind."

"Ho, any ole time! You hear that, Floss? Not that kind of a girl, eh, no! Little white sister, Kitten is, I guess maybe [illegible]."

The two put their arms around each other and screeched with laughter.

People stared.

Kitten picked up the vanity case which dangled from her wrist, studied it open with a grand lofty manner, ran a wafer of lamb's wool over her pert [illegible]. In the mirror she saw the big car halted, the driver still leaned out, watching them intently.

"Well, come on if you're coming," she said.

They went along into the ice cream shop and found a table at the back where they ordered "Dream of Love" sundaes.

The boy who took their order sent over the table with a knowing leer. "You girls say sundaes? Cause they's other kinds of them dreams and I'm the lad knows 'em all."

Dottie and Flossie snickered, but Kitten waved him away. "Small time," she remarked. "Don't waste your energy."

They settled down to conversation. "He says—" "I says—" "A terrible time getting out of the house and more. Folks that's snoopy—" "Told mine if they didn't like it I'd leave—" "Oh, I've got orange lipstick! Let me try it." "Sure!"

Soon those black chiffon [illegible] at the shop?" This from Dottie. "Maybe I wouldn't ask some! But Stell said she'd tell father about it night I combed out the window—"

Flossie flames turned her eyes wise and half closed them in an expression infinitely blase. "Stell better watch her own step if you want to believe what you hear."

"Yeah?" Dottie flushed angrily. "Guess that sounds good coming from you. What's the matter, Floss—jealous?"

"Well, of all the nerve—"

"Gosh, he's a good looker. I like him dark and thin. Spos. he's a Norris? Class, I guess!"

Kitten who said nothing saw the boy his glance picked out. He half smiled, snatched off his cap and came forward with a show of diffidence.

"Haven't I met you somewhere?" he asked softly, eyes on the flaming hair. "Seems I remember the [illegible]."

Dottie and Flossie squealed. Kitten's pose wasn't proof against the prospect of the big car. She fumbled and stammered and [illegible] and fell as the four of them went rather awkwardly into the street.

Kitten rode beside him in front. Her friends kept up a chatter in the rear, waving at whomever they knew. But she had little to say.

Contriving however she saw him watching her in the mirror above the windshield, once he reached over, but she snatched her hand away.

He drove out of Dedham and [illegible] into the country, before a low-lying [illegible] the [illegible] halted the car. This was a road house noted for a set of fast-moving and high-stepping patrons.

"Want to dance in?" he asked, [illegible] her face.

Caresses of "C[illegible]lets" from the back seat and doors being torn open Kitten looked at the place, felt a little thrill of longing another of caution. The last was stronger.

"How about it, Red-head?"

"Not today, Mr. Norris."

"Say, it ain't Norris; its Lanier [illegible] Going to remember that till tomorrow when I see you again!"

"Your new boy-friend, Peddy."

"Any ole time—"

But she did promise to meet him. [illegible] after, she said, when the other girls had [illegible] good-

Corinne Griffith to Lead 'The Divine Lady'

By LUELLA O. PARSONS.

Los Angeles, Dec. 30.—Corinne Griffith, as "The Divine Lady" How does it sound? She is greatly excited over one opportunity to play Lady Hamilton, the lady who vamped Lord Nelson and kept his affections for so many years.

"The Divine Lady" played a very big part in Corinne Griffith's determination not to make her own pictures and to return to her first love, First National.

It was the way it all happened. When Richard Rowland was on the Coast he and Miss Griffith and Corinne had at that time planned to make her own pictures and release them through United Artists. A little conversation, a few pens and she obtained her release from U. A.—an amicable arrangement with no hard feelings on either side.

Walter Morosco, who has a honor of being Miss Griffith's husband, will supervise them.

Nothing ever diminishes the interest in Jack London's stories. It is curious, considering how long he has been dead, that they continue to be excellent subjects in the movies and excellent reading.

"The Devil Skipper," one of London's colorful tales, will be produced by Tiffany-Stahl, with Tom G. Adolfi directing the picture. That Isn't all. Belle Bennett will play a leading role. Miss Bennett couldn't have to be one of the most popular mothers on the screen.

"You Said It, Marceline"

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

MOST MEN when they love
Mean to LOVE that ONE woman
Exclusively; in fact, when
They MARRY most of them
Make up their minds to it.
But it seems the GIRL
A man falls in LOVE with
Often changes with time into
A WOMAN he never could have FALLEN for anyway.

Then, of course, SOME begin to
Wonder; and others WANDER
Although men generally THINK
They like to be loved
DEEPLY, most of them prefer
To be loved with LAUGHTER.
Rather than with TEARS.
A light TOUCH makes a
Far greater impression than
A HEAVY hand.
Some women can TOUCH a man
So lightly that he never
FEELS it. This is the ART
Most sweethearts possess and
Which many WIVES lose
But you can't BEAT a wife.
If she does LOSE her
Touch she seldom loses her
GRIP. Still, the best way to Hold a man is — INTELLIGENTLY.

The Quick Magic of Calcium!
Do you want a beautiful complexion this week? A skin that fairly sparkles! One color that us all your own? Then give your system just a little calcium! Calcium clears away every impurity, her keeps the skin sallow or dull. It opens pores purged, and the cuticle sean You'll see and see the difference from the very first day you take a tiny sugar-coated Stuart calcium wafer!
A five-day test will prove to you very conclusively the system's need for calcium, and the decided benefit from these little wafers. You druggist has them—the test size for pocket is 10c. Or the family size, 50c.

FRISBY PENS INSPIRED PLEA FOR TOLERANCE? Stripe Soul in Effort to Bring About Better Understanding

Picture shows "Frisby Method" of using vacuum cleaner for the complexion.

By MISTER FRISBY
Congressman at Large

WASHINGTON.—As I study the faces that float past me in the department stores while I demonstrate vacuum cleaners I often ask myself, "What can Congressman Frisby do to advance civilization?"

And it is a constant source of comfort when the answer flashes in my mind with a dazzling blaze, "Frisby . . . the thing for you to do is keep right on demonstrating vacuum cleaners."

So it is!

I am concerned with giving the American housewife more leisure—to emancipate her from the laborious and unsanitary hand broom—so she may devote more time to civic matters, petitions and such.

And I hope to make the vacuum cleaner even more of a boon to mankind. I have shown countless thousands how the vacuum cleaner may be used to pull the stubborn shoelace from the Bolleus eyelet; to remove the tenacious sock; to retrieve the elusive collar button.

Ah, friends . . . scoff not at the humble vacuum cleaner. Do not dismiss it as a woman's toy. The vacuum cleaner will snatch the tell tale blond hair from the business man's vest, and remove the dandruff that falls, like Winter's snow, on the blue serge suit.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS---

By HELEN ROWLAND.

HOW long, oh, my Daughter, shall thou endure to be called "the illogical sex," and harken meekly to man's ha-hae?

For, verily, a woman may be as the weather which changeth with the moon and the seasons. But a man is a paradox, today, yesterday and forever!

Behold, he saith, "Fear me with apples and stay me with flagons! For I am FED UP with woman! And so woman can get me going!"

Yet, upon the morrow he meeteth another Blonde Moron; and his pulse leapeth and his heart skippeth; and he shareth the flagons WITH her.

He saith, "Not another drop shall pass my lips! For this stuff is rot-tea—eye, if is all poisonous, and only a fool would swallow it!"

Yet within the hour he meeteth a friend with a pocket flask and a "pre-war" argument. And lo, he hath signed up for another case.

He roweth, "I admire a discreet woman, and only a reserved and well-bred damsel attracteth me."

Yet, doth he seek his Ideal in the midnight cafe. And a work of art with gilded hair and a loud laugh getteth ten dancing partners, while the modest violet sitteth against the wall and pretendeth to rejoice.

He saith, "I like a frank and honest woman, and vampishness, revolteth me." Yet he falleth for a subtle worker with a cryptic smile and a veiled glance and a sensuous sachet. And she that speaketh the frank and honest truth, cutteth her throat with her own tongue!

He saith, "I cannot abide frivolity in a business office; and only brains and efficiency interest me." Yet it is NOT the Intellectual Light whom he taketh to luncheon, but the dimwit with the beautiful knees, and the good old S. A.

He yearneth for a woman to inspire him—yet spendeth all his days in the company of the women who amuse and flatter him.

He kisseth all the women whom he doth not love, and fleeth from the woman whom he loveth, lest he become entangled.

Whilst he is single and free to love, he is more cautious than a politician and more reserved than a head waiter. But when he is married he is bolder than a lion in his flirtations and full of protestations.

He saith, "How inconsistent is a woman!"

Yet, a woman knoweth at sight that which she desireth, and goeth after it. And naught in the heavens above nor in the earth beneath can stop her, until she hath GOT it!

Keep Child Up With Class

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

RHODA BOSWELL went home from school one day with a headache. Next morning there were red splotches on her face, a soreness in her throat and other symptoms that spelled a month's absence from school.

During the first week Rhoda was too ill to think about anything but her discomfort. Then she began to improve, and because she possessed a strong constitution she speedily recovered from the attack. But, in order to protect her classmates, she was required to stay at home until all danger of contagion was over.

At her mothers suggestion she called several schoolmates over the telephone and found out how much ground the class had covered in each subject. Then she opened her books at the last lesson she had recited and there she began studying. Of course, it was not possible for her to learn thoroughly in a short time what the class had learned during a whole month, nevertheless, she read over the pages, she did a little of the written exercises and worked a few examples of each day's lesson in arithmetic.

When she returned to school she was still somewhat behind the class, but listening carefully and trying a little harder than usual she managed to make up for the lost time.

Betty Slade, another girl in school, was ill at the same time. And like the majority of children she came back to school at the end of the long absence without having opened a text-book. So the recitations sounded like Greek to her. There were words and phrases and references to this or that rule that she had never heard before.

For weeks thereafter she was groping along in the dark trying to understand what it was all about. She floundered through her recitations: she failed on her written tests and consequently became discouraged and disgusted with her school work.

What do your children do about their lessons when they are absent from school?

Quite often illness affects their eyes and it is not advisable for them to use them. Then somebody else in the house might read the lessons aloud.

Time drags for children when they are shut-in; and they welcome almost any occupation. If some older member of the family is generous enough to help with the lessons, the children are usually willing to listen and learn. Pupils understand that missing the class work for a number of days will handicap them when they return to school; and most of them will make an effort to study at home if they are encouraged to do so.

There is necessarily a good deal of repetition in lessons at school. That enables a student to catch up with the class, provided he has partially covered the ground during his absence.

It is most important that your child should progress with his class. If he is absent one day or more see to it that he at least reads over the pages that his classmates learned during his absence.

Co-gecia.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

ACCORDING to railroad statistics there are over 19,000,000 commuters in America. A commuter is a man who spends half of his time catching trains, and the other half missing them.

ONE fellow has Saint Vitus dance and gets to the depot in three shakes.

IT'S a short walk and only takes him ten minutes to miss the 7:49.

BUT it's not his fault. The railroad does'nt run its trains according to his alarm clock.

HIS daughter is a commuter, too, but he never rides to town with her. He hates to sit in the smoker.

THEY used to drive to the station in their car until the finance company located them.

SHE'S a smart girl. She had her face lifted last month so that she could see the train coming.

ONE man broke his leg the other morning trying to put his socks on while running to the depot.

HE was in such a hurry to finish his breakfast that he looked at the doughnut and dipped his watch in the coffee.

HE patted his wife on the head and kissed the dog goodbye.

HE was planning to run for the $37 and only had four minutes to miss it.

A LOCAL pulled in on time one morning and 19,000 commuters sued the railroad.

THEY claimed the company was obtaining money under false pretenses.

ONE fellow got a seat the other day and was afraid to sit down. He thought something was the matter with it.

THAT'S the first time it happened in ten years. He's the kind of a guy who'd have to stand in line at the electric chair.

HE hasn't sat down since he gave up ice skating.

TRAVELING back and forth to the to the suburbs every day gets rather tiresome, but there are millions of people who don't mind it at all. We live in the city.

YOUR BAD HABI[TS]

By LUCY LOWELL

HABITS, especially bad habits, and how to overcome them, is a subject which was discussed in this column a few weeks ago.

Remembering the views of my readers concerning this worthy aim, I was interested in the experience of Benjamin Franklin in overcoming—or trying to overcome—his own bad habits.

He wrote about it at length and in line with copy part of what he wrote:

"I conceived the bold and arduous project of arriving at moral perfection. I wished to live without committing any fault at any time. I would conquer all that natural inclination, company or custom might lead me into. As I knew, or thought I knew what was right and wrong, I did not see why I might not always do the one and avoid the other. But I found I had undertaken a task more difficult than I had imagined.

"While my care was employed in guarding against one fault, I was often surprised by another habit took the advantage of inattention; inclination was sometimes too strong for reason.

"I concluded at length that the mere speculative conviction that it was our interest to be completely virtuous was not sufficient to prevent our slipping; and that the contrary habits must be broken and good ones acquired and established before we can have any dependence on a steady, uniform rectitude of conduct."

For this purpose Franklin settled upon the following virtues: Temperance, Silence, Order, Resolution, Frugality, Industry, Sincerity, Justice, Moderation, Cleanliness, Tranquility and Humility.

He set up the habitude of all these, judged it would be well to attract my attention to the whole at once, but to fix them one at a time, that I should be master of the first, proceed to another and so on, I should have gone through the thirteen; and as the practice of what he recommended on one virtue might sometimes be useful with regard to others, I arranged them nearly as they are above.

BEWARE the COUGH or C[OLD] THAT HAN[GS]

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. Don't risk them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the most reliable agencies for relief in coughs, colds and other forms of throat trouble. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, those healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes that cause irritation and inflammation. In severe throat troubles, Creomulsion is excellent because as it is absorbed into the system it attacks the seat of the trouble. At the same time it checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchitis, asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defence.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

"Most Conclusive Evidence of Mexican Intrigue"—Coolidge

The best proof of need for a thorough-going investigation by the Senate of the Mexican government's attitude toward the United States is to be found in a study of long-continued conditions that have led up to the present state of affairs.

In the background of present conditions is a long story of Mexican hostility and intrigue. It goes back wellnigh a century; a century replete with incidents that often threatened peace, and once caused war. Within the last fifteen years the menace of war has been repeated and persistent. The Pershing expedition into Mexico in 1915, and the American seizure of Vera Cruz in that same period are merely illustrations.

Along the border between the two countries there have been eruptions and incursions of Mexican bandits against American communities, which, times almost without number, have violated American sovereignty, destroyed American property, and cost great numbers of American lives. These anti-American activities on the northern border of Mexico could commonly be charged against brigands, though repeatedly it has been apparent that the Mexican authorities were little concerned to prevent such demonstrations. The American government and people have been amazingly patient and restrained.

But on the southern border of Mexico, where Central America is its next-door neighbor, the Mexican government itself has constantly stirred up trouble, encouraged revolutions, divided the little republics into factions, and generally promoted anarchy in the aim to justify Mexican intervention. These things have gone on ever since Mexico and the Central American countries were emancipated from Spanish rule. The rulers of Mexico have regarded Central America as an appropriate field for imperialistic design. Their purpose has been to establish Mexican dominance, if not absolutely to annex these countries.

Because of these conditions the United States was compelled to assume the delicate role of a quasi-protector over Central America. Such a relationship was bound to excite jealousies and suspicion and further to divide the Central American peoples into factions; yet it was forced upon the United States by Mexico's attitude.

Passing over earlier instances, the United States in 1912 was compelled to intervene in Nicaragua to suppress disorder, and from then until 1925 maintained at Managua a legation guard of marines to protect American life and property. Ultimately Senor Adolfo Diaz assumed the Nicaraguan presidency pursuant to designation by that country's congress. Immediately after taking office Diaz complained to the United States of the hostile actions of Mexico, and asked American assistance. So serious was the situation that President Coolidge on January 10, 1927, in a special message communicated to Congress a detailed history of these transactions. He quoted approvingly the statement of the Nicaraguan president as follows:

"Upon assuming the presidency I found the republic in a very difficult situation because of the attitude assumed without motive by the government of Mexico in open hostility to Nicaragua. It must be clear to you that given the forces which that government disposes of, its elements of attack are irresistible for this feeble and small nation. This condition places in imminent risk the sovereignty and independence of Nicaragua, and consequently, the continental equilibrium on which the pan-Americanism is founded which the United States has fostered with such lofty spirit.

"For these reasons . . . I address myself to you in order that . . . you may solicit for my government and in my name the support of the Department of State in order to reach a solution in the present crisis and avoid further hostilities and invasions on the part of the government of Mexico."

After quoting the above and much more, President Coolidge proceeded:

"Immediately following the inauguration of President Diaz and frequently since that date, he has appealed to the United States for support, has informed this government of the aid which Mexico is giving to the revolutionists, and has stated that he is not able solely because of the aid given by Mexico to the revolutionists to protect the lives and property of American and other foreigners."

President Coolidge said he had ordered an embargo on the shipment of arms and ammunition to Nicaragua and suggested to Mexico it also impose an embargo; but Mexico refused. The President continued:

"As a matter of fact, I have the most conclusive evidence that arms and munitions in large quantities have been on several occasions since August, 1926, shipped to the revolutionists in Nicaragua.

"Boats carrying these munitions have been fitted out in Mexican ports, and some of the munitions bear evidence of having belonged to the Mexican government.

"It also appears that the ships were fitted out with the full knowledge of and in some cases with the encouragement of Mexican officials and were in one instance, at least, commanded by a Mexican naval reserve officer."

After describing at length the machinations of Mexico and the consequent disastrous situation in Nicaragua, President Coolidge noted that various foreign governments had appealed to the United States for protection of their interests and nationals in Nicaragua. He called attention to the large number of Americans and extensive American investments in Nicaragua and finally he reminded Congress that in 1914 Nicaragua by treaty granted to the United States exclusive right to construct a canal across Nicaragua. For these rights the United States paid Nicaragua $3,000,000.

These rights are imminently menaced by the whole policy and procedure of Mexico throughout Central America. They are vitally important to the United States. In a not distant future it is likely to be necessary to build this Nicaraguan canal. The persistent intrigues and interpositions of Mexico, seeking to destroy American rights and Central America's sovereignty, constitute a policy of definite hostility toward the United States.

The American people are entitled to full knowledge of such a menace, persistent for many years, more serious now than ever before. The whole subject having been opened it is the duty of the Senate to go to its bottom.

MORAL ASPECT OF THE WAGE SYSTEM

By DR. FRANK CRANE

USUALLY the money-making individual gets a very black eye from most high-brow writers. They think if a man does a thing in order to get money he should be somewhat ashamed of it.

I wish to say a good word for the desire to make money. It seems to me it is about the most wholesome desire in the human bosom.

What would we do unless people could make money? The gas we burn in the house would remain in the coal if there were no profits in taking it out and piping it to the residence.

You could not have electricity unless it paid somebody to bring it to your house.

You would have to do without most of the food you eat and the clothes you wear if nobody could make a profit by supplying you with them.

We should be very glad to give these middlemen something for their brains. Without their services life would be barren indeed.

Giving people wages or pay is the way we induce people to do something for us which we cannot do or do not want to do ourselves.

Formerly we had a system of slavery by which men did what we didn't want to do.

The conscience of the world rebelled against that, and now to get a man to do for us what we do not want to do ourselves, or cannot do, we simply pay him. Without this system of paying people for their labor there would be none of it done for us.

The wage system beautifies our lives, fills it with comforts and luxuries and the whole fabric of society rests upon it.

Every man or woman should not only be busy but should be busy about something that the world is willing to pay for.

When somebody pays for what you do, you may be sure your work is needed. If you are just working for nothing, you may be more of a nuisance than a benefit.

Boston DAY by DAY

UNDER the successful leadership of the late Mrs. Bertha I. Kagan and of Mrs. Juliet Isaacs of Brookline, the Women's Scholarship Association has placed several scholarships in Radcliffe, Boston University and Simmons. These scholarships are for the benefit of freshmen and have helped many girls since the first move was made in 1917. The latest addition to the fund will be made soon when a $2,000 award will go to the Boston Hebrew College in Roxbury. Mrs. Maurice Sapers, as president, is directly responsible for this worthy assistance.

George F. Eddy of Milton, well-known refrigerator man, was recently explaining his reason for being hungry at noon time. Eddy eats breakfast at 8 a. m. and then sets out for the day's work. Arriving at the factory about 7:30 a. m., he almost has a day's work done before other business men arrive. His day seldom ends until late in the afternoon.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel Macaulay Lindsay of the Baptist Church in Brookline has a successful Bible class building record. The class, organized in May, 1926, had about 40 members. Since then, by interesting programs and hard work on the part of the membership committee, the class has increased to about 250. The average Sunday attendance is about 200, with a record of 279 one Sunday. Dr. Lindsay says that the spirit of the class has caught "like fire" in every department of the church.

George Taylor of West Newton tells how New England products are received in other parts of the country. When Taylor was in Detroit, he noticed a large store window full of New England goods. There were clocks from Chelsea and electric clocks from Springfield and Ashland. Steel scales from Athol and a selection of hand tools, bench lathes and grinder heads from Greenfield completed the window.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WE have been hearing much about the "economic problem" lately. How it isn't possible for young people to marry before their dotage because of said "economic problem"—and how they're being driven into free love and companionate marriage and other unconventional calisthenics because of this unprecedented and demoralizing lack of kale.

Well, maybe that's the reason. And maybe it isn't. However, I can't help remembering—

No, my memories do not extend such a very long way back. Just before the late war. That's far enough. Before the late war when we used to patch our shirt-waists under the arms.

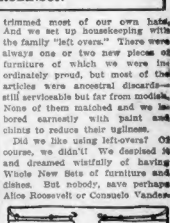
Patches? What were they? Something you've probably never heard of, my dear. But we used 'em eziensivelyg in those days. No, we weren't in the bread line. We were not subsisting on doles, pensions, alms or pittances. We were young people of the comfortable middle class, most of us newly married. All quite pretty, too—and proud of our prettiness. Still Gibson Girls. We read good books, we knew good music. We went to the opera when the opera was in town. Our husbands worked in banks and real estate offices and wore tuxedos - sometimes. We weren't, perhaps, as interesting and amusing as young married people of today, but we were much more dignified and took ourselves far more seriously.

Yet, after office hours, our husbands weeded the vegetable gardens which were invariably found in our backyards. And We Girls sat and watched them and patched our shirt-waists under the arms.

Not an exciting evening, but not one seemed to be bored. Nor were we overcome with humiliation at the necessity of weeding and patching, nor did we weep big, wet tears of self pity. Couldn't we have bought new shirt-waists for ourselves instead of patching the old ones? Certainly. But that sort of thing wasn't done, save by the shiftless and irresponsible. If your shirt-waist was only a little worn, you patched it as a matter of course.

We did other odd things. We carried bundles. We shampooed our own hair. We had our shoes half-soled—and blackened them ourselves. All well-regulated homes had shoe blacking kits. We trimmed most of our own hats. And we set up housekeeping with the family "left overs." There were always one or two new pieces of furniture of which we were inordinately proud, but most of the articles were ancestral discards—still serviceable but far from models. None of them matched and we labored earnestly with paint and chintz to reduce their ugliness.

Did we like using left-overs? Of course, we didn't! We despised it and dreamed wistfully of having Whole New Sets of furniture and dishes. But nobody, save perhaps Alice Roosevelt or Consuelo Vanderbilt ever had whole new sets of anything. That wasn't the way young folks began housekeeping in those days.



Yesterday, Pete and Peggy dropped in to see me. They have been engaged for two years but they wouldn't dream of marrying yet. Pete only gets $40 a week—and Peggy has been earning almost that much and spending it on herself since. How can two possibly live on it? Why, you can't get a decent furnished apartment anywhere near town for less than $70. And as for clothes—Everyone says that Peggy is the classiest dresser in her crowd. That was really why Pete fell for her—But that new fur jacket cost $460. And when you count marcelles and dry cleaning and silk underwear—

Yes, young folks are certainly up against a problem these days. But I wonder if it is entirely economic?
